Jazz is one of the primary foundations for American music in the twentieth and twenty-first centuries. This course offers an introduction to jazz music, the lives of many of its most important practitioners, and the ways in which the jazz community intersects with diverse socio-cultural identities and experiences. It presents both a chronological history of jazz and an in-depth investigation of how the music reflected and shaped its social context by exploring the often provocative role jazz has played in American and global society, the diverse perceptions and arguments that have surrounded its production and reception, and how these have been inflected by issues of race, ethnicity, class, nationality, gender, sexuality, and ability/disability, among others.

Course Objectives

• explore the history of jazz from its roots to the present day and learn to appreciate the stakes and motives behind the controversies and debates that have always surrounded jazz
• offer a look into the lives and musical contributions of the most important jazz players and ways to understand how these lives and contributions often reflect societal inequities in all aspects of diversity, as well as institutional and systemic oppression
• learn to understand the history of jazz in terms of changes in both musical techniques and social values
• gain greater knowledge of U.S. and International history as it affects and is affected by musical activities
• recognize music as a site of celebration and struggle over relationships and ideals
• increase our abilities to hear differences among performances and styles of jazz, and, more importantly, to interpret the meanings of such differences
• learn to use historical perspective, social context, cultural understandings, and technological mediation as prisms through which we can understand why a piece of music sounds the way it does, what the music signifies about a particular time and place, and how its meanings may change for musicians and audiences over time.

Upon completion of this course, students should have…

• a deeper understanding of how jazz music is created and an ability to identify and describe jazz performances in terms of their instrumentation, style, form, and function
• a chronological understanding of the development of jazz up to the present day in terms of both musical and social changes
• a deeper awareness of jazz with regards to its cultural and historical significance
• a nuanced understand of the ways in which jazz musicians and the jazz community have negotiated—both successfully and unsuccessfully—important issues of race, ethnicity, class, nationality, gender, sexuality, ability/disability, and other markers of difference.
• a better sense of how jazz music, on both formal and symbolic levels, champions the inclusion of diverse musical styles and individual voices, and aspires to establish an equitable relationship (both during and beyond the moment of performance) in which individuals feel empowered to support the group or community, and the community or group is organized and empowered to support individuals.
• an increased self-awareness of how music and musical preferences both reflect and shape personal identity, and how musical practices can be used to foster diversity, equity, and inclusion.
Required Texts:

Listening lists will be organized and made available digitally. Films relating to the subject matter will also be assigned/screened and discussed.

GRADING

- 20% — Course and Event attendance and participation
- 20% — THREE In-class quizzes (designed to gauge student preparedness and engagement, including familiarity with all assigned readings and listening to date) (only two highest grades will count, 10% ea.)
- 20% — TWO film/concert reviews (10% ea.) or ONE longer research paper (to meet writing-intensive requirements)
- 30% — Final exam (involves listening identification and short writing about terminology, ideas, and issues from the course, and more involved written responses to prompts about course content that must also carefully reference relevant course reading and listening examples).
- 10% — collaborative work on producing final concert event

There will be no incomplete or in-progress grades given.

Grading, scheduling details, and assignments are subject to change at the discretion of the professor.

Attendance is expected at every class session. If you expect to miss any class sessions, please discuss this with your professor. One absence may be forgiven with instructor consent, but any additional absences will result in lowering a student's final grade by one letter grade for each missed class. If you expect to miss a class session during which a quiz is given, you must contact your instructor prior to the class session starting and you must arrange an alternate time before the next class session meets to take the missed quiz. Beyond this stipulation, late work is not accepted. Sickness or travel plans are not considered acceptable excuses for late or incomplete work.

Etiquette: Class discussions should be both informed and respectful. All students are encouraged to raise questions, explore ideas, and express misgivings. I encourage a spirited discussion, and disagreement is both healthy and welcome. I will aim to make certain that everyone's voice is heard and that all viewpoints are given equal consideration. When in doubt about how you should speak, write, or act, always err on the side of formality. You will never offend or annoy someone by being overly formal and polite.

The use of personal technology (laptops, mobile phones, etc.) is not permitted during lecture (see here, here, and here). You may wish to purchase an old-fashioned notebook for the class, and you must have blank paper and a pencil/pen to complete the in-class quizzes.

ACADEMIC INTEGRITY

UCSD has a university-wide Policy on Integrity of Scholarship, published annually in the General Catalog, and online at http://students.ucsd.edu/academics/academic-integrity/policy.html. All students must read and be familiar with this Policy. All suspected violations of academic integrity will be reported to UCSD’s Academic Integrity Coordinator. Students found to have violated UCSD’s standards for academic integrity may receive both administrative and academic sanctions. Administrative sanctions may extend up to and include suspension or dismissal, and academic sanctions may include failure of the assignment or failure of the course. Examples of prohibited violations of academic integrity include, but are not limited to:

- Academic stealing refers to the theft of exams or exam answers, of papers or take-home exams composed by others, and of research notes, computer files, or data collected by others.

- Academic cheating, collusion, and fraud refer to having others do your schoolwork or allowing them to present your work as their own; using unauthorized materials during exams; inventing data or bibliography to support a paper, project, or exam; purchasing tests, answers, or papers from any source whatsoever; submitting (nearly) identical papers to two classes.

- Misrepresenting personal or family emergencies or health problems in order to extend deadlines and alter due dates or requirements is another form of academic fraud. Claiming you have been ill when you were not, claiming that a family member has been ill or has died when that is untrue are some examples of unacceptable ways of trying to gain more time than your fellow students have been allowed in which to complete assigned work.

- Plagiarism refers to the use of another’s work without full acknowledgment, whether by suppressing the reference, neglecting to identify direct quotations, paraphrasing closely or at length without citing sources, spuriously identifying quotations or data, or cutting and pasting the work of several (usually unidentified) authors into a single undifferentiated whole.
